Concept Note

“Can Policies Last? Governmental Experience between Transmission and Oblivion as in the Dealings with Nomads, Islamic to Modern”

The solution to a structural problem is only as valuable as its lasting effect and active perpetuation. While this requires the handing down of governmental knowledge through generations, knowledge transmission by pre-modern rulers and senior officials usually endured pervasive shortcomings such as, e.g., the perils of succession. It thus happened that lessons weren't learned and solutions turned out short-lived.

Prof. Dr Kurt Franz

Professor

Prof. Dr. Kurt Franz is a historian of the Islamic Early and Middle Periods. He has notably published on social and political history, scholarship, and geography in the lands of Islam between 600 and 1600, including Historical Cartography on a GIS basis. PhD Hamburg, professorship Tübingen, now private scholar.

It was in 1960 when the DAAD Regional Office was established on the basis of the German-Egyptian Cultural Agreement. Since then, the academic relations between Egypt and Germany have evolved steadily. The close cooperation has unwrapped new horizons for the scientific bonds of both countries to further develop and flourish. Thousands of Egyptian scholars have benefited ever since from these ties. <https://www.daad.eg/>

Clusters of Scientific Innovation in the Middle East and North Africa (COSIMENA)

In the scope of COSIMENA the DAAD Office Cairo realises interdisciplinary events on current issues in science and innovation, such as workshops, conferences, roundtable discussions, the German Science Day, the COSIMENA Science Night and a Summer School. The several activities aim to bring together various stakeholders from science, business, government, and civil society. Especially scientists are promoted and supported through networking opportunities. www.daad.eg/cosimena

Orient Institut Beirut

The Orient-Institut Beirut (OIB) is an independent academic research institute, belonging to the Max Weber Foundation. It is mainly funded through the Federal Ministry of Education and Research in Germany. It conducts interdisciplinary research on the Arab world and the region of West Asia and North Africa at large. Its research community comprises long-term research associates from Germany and short-term visiting fellows from all over the world, who represent the major disciplines of the humanities and social sciences, including Islamic and Arab studies, history and anthropology of the Middle East, as well as sociology and political sciences. <https://orient-institut.org>

OIB-COSIMENA Research Colloquium III

Following the success of the OIB-COSIMENA Colloquium I on New Islamic Ethics & the OIB-COSIMENA Colloquium II on Knowledge Transfer, the Orient Institut Beirut (Cairo Office) is organizing a new series in cooperation with the DAAD Regional Office Cairo in the period between September 2025 to December 2025 on History as Concepts, Conflicts and Solutions.

As is well known, History is the systematic study and documentation of the past that enables the study of continuity and change over time. Historians use all forms and types of evidence to examine, interpret, revisit, and reinterpret the past. These include not just written documents, but also oral communication and objects such as buildings, artifacts, photographs, and paintings to understand the past and also make sense of the present, thereby forming a bridge to other disciplines. The different interpretations of the past allow us to see the present differently and therefore imagine - and work towards - different futures.

Much has been said about history and how it is written. Winston Churchill is quoted as saying that "History will be kind to me, for I intend to write it." In his view, our understanding of history isn't complete or objective but tends to privilege the version of events of those in power. Though Napoleon Bonaparte was in power and was many times victorious; he is quoted as saying, "History is a set of lies, agreed upon." To counter the historical versions of the powerful and victorious, several concepts were developed to include the minorities, vanquished, and marginalized, like for example history from below or history from within. Feminists have also made it a point to argue that history was mainly written by men, which is apparent in the name his-story and have called for her-story as well. Yet most have agreed that ignoring history also affects the future, as the philosopher Santayana said, "Those who do not remember the past are condemned to repeat it." Many problems we face in the present have their roots in the distant past and cannot be solved or eradicated unless we study the reasons for their existence. The German-American historian Hajo Holborn said that "History gives answers only to those who know how to ask questions." Therefore, if we want to understand our today, we have to search for answers in yesterday. This lecture series will present eight lectures on history from different perspectives, divided into three interdisciplinary clusters. The first cluster will discuss history as concepts, meaning history and historiography as such, as well as from below and from within, and the different ways to study history. The second cluster will discuss conflicts in history, as in conflicting narratives, narratives leading to conflict, deconstruction and reconstruction and different ways to deal with smoothing over such conflicts. The final cluster will provide the positive end, namely, solutions in various ways. Solutions to historical problems, solutions to conflicts in historical views, and solutions to mining history's secrets.

The following dates are planned for the events:

1st Cluster: History as Concepts

- Wednesday, 3rd September 2025
- Wednesday, 24th September 2025

2nd Cluster: History as Conflicts

- Wednesday, 8th October 2025
- Wednesday, 22nd October 2025
- Wednesday, 5th November 2025

3rd Cluster: History as Solutions

- Wednesday, 26th November 2025
- Wednesday, 3rd December 2025
- Wednesday, 17th December 2025
